

Allyship Beyond the Basics: Personal Pronouns and Why They Matter

Why should you include your pronouns when you introduce yourself?

- 1. It's a quick and easy way to vocalize inclusion as well as to support, celebrate, and affirm our transgender and nonbinary colleagues.
- 2. It communicates where our values lie and that we envision a world where diversity is celebrated and all people are respected, valued, and affirmed inclusive of their sexual orientation, gender identity, and gender expression.
- 3. It can be a conversation starter that allows us to lead with our allyship and educate new and potential allies about gender identity, gender expression, and the gender spectrum.

Pronouns: The basics and beyond! Oblique Pronoun Nominative Possessive Possessive Reflexive He likes He He is laughing I called him His eyes gleam That is his himself Have questions She likes She She is laughing I called her That is hers about a Her eyes gleam herself pronoun that is not included They They are They like Lcalled them That is theirs here? (most Their eyes gleam themself laughing common) Google the Xe likes Xe Xe is laughing I called xem Xyr eyes gleam That is xyrs term "zee" xemself "neopronoun" Ze I called zir That is zirs Ze likes zirself Ze is laughing Zir eyes gleam "zee" pflag.org

What do I use?

- She/her/hers: Typically used for people who identify as female, regardless of how they were assigned at birth. Example: She is the woman who is the CEO of the corporation.
- He/him/his: Typically used for people who identify as male, regardless of what they were assigned at birth. Example: He is a man who likes cats.
- They/them/theirs: Typically seen as a gender-neutral or gender-fluid designation, often used by people who were assigned a binary sex with which they do not identify. Example: Jamie went to the store and they bought soda.
- Xe/Ze and Xyr/Zir: These terms are most often used with individuals who identify as nonbinary in their gender identity. These words are often associated with (but certainly not limited to) more activist and academic spaces. Example: Ze is really good at trigonometry.